Dear Mr. Tanida:

The United States Patent and Trademark Office has adopted a procedure for issuing limited recognition numbers to persons granted limited recognition under 37 CFR 1.9(b).

You have been assigned limited recognition number L0098

The limited recognition number must be included under your signature in each document you file and in each patent application you prosecute. It is no longer necessary for you to file a copy of the grant of limited recognition in each application if you use the limited recognition number. You must also include your limited recognition number in all correspondence with the Office of Enrollment and Discipline. You may use your limited recognition number to obtain or be added to an existing customer number and to access PAIR. Information regarding the customer number is attached.

If you cease to lawfully reside in the United States, if your visa expires, or you change employers, whichever occurs first, you must promptly file notice of the same and withdraw from representation in each patent application in which you have used your limited recognition number. You also must file notice with the Office of Enrollment and Discipline. You may no longer use your limited recognition number if you cease to lawfully reside in the United States, if your visa expires, or if your employment with McDermott, Will & Emery ceases or is terminated.

Sincerely,

Shirley A. Martin
